You want to study at Leipzig University, but your German isn’t good enough yet! Leipzig University offers free German language courses for refugees as a preparation for university studies, which start in April 2019. The course period is six to nine months and the courses lead to the language level C1 (DSH). An acceptance test will be held in March.

What do I need in order to take part in a course?
- knowledge of the German language, level B1 - a direct university admission qualification (secondary school certificate or first university degree) - specification of your preferred study programme at Leipzig University

Where can I apply?
- Please apply via uni assist e.V.:
  1) For the application, it is necessary to prove a TestAS (Test for Academic Studies - www.refugees.testas.de) or a ‘Beratungsschein’ (obtainable after presenting your certificates in a counselling during our office hours).
  2) After a successful registration with uni-assist you can apply for the ‘German language course for refugees’.
