The Faculty of Law seeks to fill the following tenure track professorship, funded by the Tenure Track Programme of the German Federal Government and the Federal States, from 1 April 2021:

W1 Junior Professorship in Constitutional and Administrative Law with a focus on the law of politics (with tenure track leading to W3)

The future job holder should be experienced in research and teaching in Constitutional and Administrative Law and ideally already have a focus on the law of politics. In addition to basic teaching in the subjects mentioned, the successful candidate’s duties will include research on the law of politics. The term refers here not only to the level of the open nation state, but also to the levels of the European Union and international cooperation. The successful candidate will be expected to contribute to Leipzig University’s strategic research field of Changing Orders in a Globalised World, and to work together with the Research Institute for Social Cohesion, the Institute for Law and Politics, and the Institute for Basics of Law. Some experience of acquiring external funding would be desirable.

The tenure track professorship is initially limited to three years. It will be extendable by a further three years subject to successful intermediate evaluation according to the Regulations on the Interim Evaluation Procedure for Junior Professors at Leipzig University (ZevaO). No later than five years after employment commences, a tenure evaluation will be conducted under the Regulations on the Constitution, Procedure and Evaluation of Tenure Track Professorships at Leipzig University (TTO). The evaluation procedure is based on a binding, mutual evaluation agreement concluded at the start of employment, which sets out the development goals and expectations with regard to the professor’s individual performance in the categories of research, teaching, knowledge transfer as well as academic and non-university commitment. After successful tenure evaluation, appointment to a permanent W3 professorship pursuant to Sect. 59(2) of the Saxon Freedom of Higher Education Act (SächsHSFG) will take place without readvertising the vacancy.

The job holder’s rights and obligations are regulated by Sect. 63, 64 and 70 of the SächsHSFG and the Saxon Service Regulations for Higher Education Institutions (DAVOHS).

The tenure track professorship is considered a position for postdoctoral qualification. Therefore, the call is addressed to applicants with a completed doctoral degree, attributed with magna cum laude or higher, who seek further qualification and have not yet completed a habilitation. If applicants were employed as research associates or research assistants prior to or during the completion of their doctoral studies, the total period of employment and work on the doctoral thesis should not exceed six years. Applicants should have changed universities after completing their doctorate or have been academically active outside Leipzig University for at least two years. They should have completed their doctorate no more than four years ago.

Leipzig University is committed to gender equality. Severely disabled persons are encouraged to apply and will be given preference in the case of equal suitability.

Applications with the usual documents, including a detailed CV, a list of scientific work and academic teaching to date including available records of teaching evaluations, and a certified copy of the highest academic degree acquired should be sent, either by post or electronically as a single PDF document, to:
